STRONGHEART SAYS HE IS NOT GUILTY

NOW ON TRIAL IN FEDERAL COURT ON SERIOUS CHARGE

DECLARES HE CAME TO FLORIDA TO INVESTIGATE MURDER AND DOES NOT OWE FOR AUTOMOBILE HIRE.

Mayor Titus, W. K. Macbeth and C. B. Williams went back to Jacksonville this morning as witnesses in a case against John Strongheart, the Seminole Indian, now being tried in the federal court in the metropolis. The case was called Monday and set over until today, the Daytona witnesses returning to this city to await the trial today.

The charge against the Indian is that of unlawfully intending to defraud one J. F. Campbell by falsely assuming and pretending to be an employe, acting under authority of the United States to wit: As a secret officer.

Strongheart is being represented by Attorney Jacob Malsovitz in the trial in the United States court.

Strongheart is a college graduate and impressive looking Indian. He speaks correctly and grammatically and has a convincing manner and appears to be always at his ease.

When Strongheart came to Florida in the winter last year he said he came from Oklahoma for the purpose of investigating the killing of Dellote Tiger, a Seminole Indian, who, he said, had been murdered by a white man and robbed of furs and skins valued at $2,800. He said he tried to get the state to capture the murderer but that nothing was done, so he started on a lecture tour to arouse sentiment in behalf of the Seminoles and that he became ill and went to Georgia.

He admits that while in Florida last year he rode in many automobiles and visited many points along the East Coast, going as far south as Key West, but that he does not owe any money for automobile hire. Strongheart declares he has committed no crime. He says that everywhere he went he spoke for the cause of his people and that he used $2,000 of his own money in paying his own way for the purpose.

With Messrs. Titus, Macbeth and Williams as witnesses against him the Indian will be given an opportunity during his trial to explain how he came to give bogus checks in Daytona to pay for the use of automobiles during the several days he spent in this vicinity.

END OF DYNAMITE CASE NEAR

CLOSING ARGUMENTS BEGUN BY GOVERNMENT ATTORNEY

JUDGE ANDERSON DISCHARGES ONE DEFENDANT AND THEN ORDERS GOVERNMENT TO OPEN THE ARGUMENTS.

INDIANOPOLIS, Ind. Dec. 18—After informing the jury that he had discharged one of the defendants, Clarence Dowd of Rochester, Judge Anderson this morning ordered the government attorneys to begin their opening arguments against the defendants in the dynamite conspiracy cases which have been on trial here for several weeks.

Special District Attorney Noel began the arguments for the government with a general summary tending to convict the various defendants with conspiracy.

Rumors of a plot to blow up the federal building, where the dynamite case is in progress, caused considerable excitement today. The grand jury is investigating.

ULTIMATUM IS DELIVERED TO TURKISH ENVOYS TODAY

TURKS MUST TREAT WITH GREEKS AND MEET DEMANDS OF BALKAN ALLIES AS TO NEW BOUNDARY LINES.

LONDON, Dec. 18.—Leading Europ Danoff of Bulgaria today presented an ultimatum to the Turkish delegates that all negotiations for peace will be broken off tomorrow unless the Turks give satisfactory reply to the proposition of the Balkan allies.

Chief among these propositions, it is understood, are that the Turks must treat with the Greeks and meet the demands concerning new boundary lines.

After the conference today the leading Greek envoy said he does not think it will be necessary for United States or any other great power to mediate, "although the future can not be accurately foreseen."

BOUND OVER TO CRIMINAL COURT FOR CARRYING GUN

JAMES MEANS, WHITE, BELIEVED TO BE INSANE AND TURNED OVER TO COUNTY AUTHORITIES.

James Means, the man who brought terror to residents in the vicinity of Blake by styling himself a United States marshal and carelessly toting a gun, was taken before Justice Euber yesterday afternoon and given a hearing on a charge of carrying a gun.

As the best means of turning the man over to the county authorities for an examination as to his sanity, Justice Euber bound the man over to the criminal court on bonds of $100. The man is a white man, instead of colored, as the impression was given out yesterday, and is the same one that gave Officers Michael and Long such a merry chase through the woods yesterday morning.

SOSSAMON IS SENTENCED TO SEVEN YEARS

MAN WHO GAVE OFFICERS MUCH TROUBLE IS SENT UP

DECEMBER TERM OF CRIMINAL COURT AT VOLUSIA COUNTY SEAT PROVES A BUSY SESSION.

DELAND, Fla., Dec. 18 — Charles Sossamon, the slippery fugitive who caused the officers of Volusia county so much trouble before he was finally brought before the criminal court to answer the charge of issuing a check without funds in the bank, must now pay heavily for his misconduct. At the December term of the criminal court here he was sentenced to serve seven years in the state penitentiary. Sossamon is the man who was captured in Detroit and jumped from the window of a moving train while being brought south through Georgia by Sheriff Smith. Later he was captured in Washington and finally landed in the Volusia county jail.

The docket as completed for the December term of the court is as follows:

State vs. Clarance A. Young—manslaughter; continued; capias issued.

DADE COUNTY IS HOT AFTER GOOD ROADS APPROPRIATION

CITIZENS OF COUNTY IN SOUTH PART OF STATE TO PRESENT FACTS TO THE POSTMASTER GENERAL.

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 15—With facts that cannot be controverted and with a condition of affairs that no other county in the state can equal, Dade county strongly hopes to be able to land that $10,000 post road appropriation the United States government has for expenditure in the state of Florida.

Among the facts which will be laid before the postmaster general will be that Dade county has already expended over $500,000 in road building and has within the last few months voted bonds for $300,000 for more roads, the belief being that the government would rather put its money in the county where there is "something doing" than in a community where the people care not for good roads.

The postoffice department states explicitly that one of the reasons for the building of short stretches of post roads in the various states is to ascertain whether or not good roads will increase the population in the vicinity of these roads. Dade county has good roads and the population in the past 12 years has increased from 500 to 17,000. The government census of Dade county in 1890, was 861, in 1900 it was 4,955, in 1910 it was 11,935. The estimated population today is 17,000. During this time the area of the county was cut in two by the incorporation of Palm Beach county which was made out of Dade county.

With a road tax of $70,000 and an expenditure on roads in the county greater than that which the government expects to expend in the entire nation, Dade county boosters believe this county stands a good show of getting the government's Florida post road appropriation.

W. W. MARSHALL PURCHASES ANOTHER TRACT OF LAND

TAKES OVER HANDSOME PIECE OF PROPERTY OWNED BY S. A. PIERCE ON NORTH RIDGEWOOD AVENUE.

Another notable real estate transfer was consummated Monday when W. W. Marshall of Hardwick, Vt., added to his holdings in this vicinity, the handsome tract of land at the southwest corner of Ridgewood and North avenues, purchased last season by S. A. Pierce of Jamestown, R. I., and recently underbrushed and put in excellent appearance by him.

There are about eight acres of land in this tract, which is nicely located and beautifully timbered on the Ridgewood avenue frontage and Mr. Marshall proposes to at once subdivide it and place the lots on the market this season. The transfer was made through the A. E. Donnell realty real estate agency.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

HOLIDAY FRUIT PUDDINGS.

INSTEAD of plum pudding some families find a simpler and more digestible sweet desirable as a finish for the Christmas feast, which is heavy enough without a rich pudding.

In families where there are small folks it is so often advisable to omit the plum pudding that the following recipes may be useful in suggesting desserts that will be like yet not so rich as the English plum pudding:

Inviting Pastries.

Baked Cranberry Pudding.—Take two well beaten eggs, a cupful each of sugar and milk and two tablespoonfuls of butter. Beat these together, first creaming the sugar and butter, and add to this three cupfuls of flour and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder which have been sifted together. Wash and drain a cup and a half of nice, firm cranberries and stir these into the batter. Butter a pudding dish, pour the batter into it and bake in a moderate oven. Serve with whipped cream or cranberry sauce.

Fig Pudding.—Fig pudding is sometimes served for Christmas dinner in the place of plum pudding and is made of one cupful of molasses, one cupfu of chopped suet, one cupful of milk, three and one-quarter cupfuls of flour, two eggs, one teaspoonful of soda, one of cinnamon, one-half a teaspoonful of nutmeg, one pint of figs. Mix together the molasses, suet, spices and the figs cut fine. Dissolve the soda with a tablespoonful of hot water and mix with the milk. Add the other ingredients. Beat the eggs light and stir into the mixture. Add the flour and beat thoroughly. Butter two small or one large mold, turn the mixture into the mold and steam five hours. Serve with a cream sauce.

Christmas Good Cheer.

Fruit Pudding.—Beat the yolks of five eggs, add a cup of sugar and beat again. Take half a pound of minced suet, of ground nutmeg, cinnamon and cloves a teaspoonful each, two cupfuls of milk and a pint of flour. Have ready chopped two ounces of citron and a half pound of seeded raisins. To these add half a pound of cleaned currants and dredge all with flour. Stir the fruit slowly into the flour and last of all stir in the stiff whites of the five eggs. Turn all into a well greased pudding dish and bake in a moderately heated oven for an hour and three-quarters.

WALL STREET HAS MAZE OF DIRECTORATES

341 CORPORATION DIRECTORS CONTROLLING $22,125,000,000

TABLE PRESENTED TO THE PUJO INVESTIGATING COMMITTEE CONTAINS STARTLING REVELATIONS.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18—A table showing the affiliations of J. P. Morgan & Co. and an enormous interlocking maze of directorates in Wall street, was produced before the Pujo committee investigating the money trust today.

By this table it was shown that Morgan & Co., the First National bank, the National City bank, the Guarantee Trust company and the Bankers' Trust company have 118 directors in 34 banks and trust companies, having total resources of $2,500,000,000. Besides this they have 30 directors in ten insurance companies, with assets of $2,125,000,000, 105 directors in 32 transportation companies with a capitalization of $1,750,000,000 and controlling 150,000 miles of railroads, 63 directors in 24 trading corporations with a total capitalization of $3,125,000,000, 25 directors in 12 public utilities corporations with a total capitalization of more than $2,000,000,000. In all, in this combination there are 341 directors in 112 corporations having aggregate resources of $22,125,000,000.

DEVIL BIRD HAS AWFUL CRY

[illegible]

[illegible] The natives of Ceylon regard the cry of this bird with superstitious horror, for, it is claimed, its scream heard at night presages the most dire misfortunes.

A British official of the Ceylon civil service has given some study to this curious bird. Its ordinary note, he states, is a magnificent clear shout like that of a human being heard at a great distance, and producing a fine effect in the silence of the night.

But the sounds that have earned for the bird its bad name, and which this officer reports he heard to perfection but once, are said to be wellnigh indescribable, the most appalling that can be imagined, and scarcely to be heard without a shudder. It has been compared to the cries of a boy in torture, whose screams are being stopped by strangulation.—Scientific American.

Use of Checks in France.

The governor of the Banque de France has just sent to the director of the departmental branch offices a circular instructing them about the use of crossed checks. The Temps in publishing these instructions points out the advantage of the English method of employing checks and then shows how the French system of making payments immobilizes capital unproductively in purse, drawer or bank, whereas as these sums converted into checks would be profitable not only to their owner but also for the bank which employs them.

While the Bank of France has to face a bank note circulation of 5,000,000,000 francs and the monetary stock is 211 francs 75 centimes per head of the contributions, England with a greater amount of business has a bank note circulation of 638,000,000 francs and a monetary stock of 84 francs 13 centimes.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Playing Santa Claus.

Once Peter and Patty and Polly
Went out for a ride on the trolley.
A quarter and dime
Each had at the time
To spend on some sweet Christmas folly.

Polly and Patty said, "Candy."
While Peter, a bit of a dandy,
Decided to buy
A dainty necktie
To make himself look spick and spandy.

And then—on the corner stood Molly,
Thin, ragged and quite melancholy
And sobbing aloud
In the hurrying crowd,
For she'd fallen and broken her dolly.

Such a poor little midget they thought her
That right up between them they caught her.
To a toy shop they went,
Every penny they spent,
And a lovely new dolly they bought her.

What a Christmas thing! and so jolly,
That Peter and Patty and Polly,
All out for good times
With their quarters and dimes,
Should have chosen to spend them on Molly!

—St. Nicholas.

Game of Occupations.

Each chooses some kind of work to do, calling it out so all can hear. Then the leader begins a story—for example "I went out today, but just as I came through the kitchen I saw our cook"—Here the player who has chosen to be a cook steps forward and goes through some cooking motions, saying, "What was she doing?" If the leader finds out in three guesses the cook goes back to her place. If not she becomes leader and goes on with the story. That will, of course, be made to suit the occupations and may proceed something like this: "I went down the steps and walked to the corner, where there was a carpenter busy at—, and on a roof across the street a plumber was"— And so on. The breaks are filled, as previous described. Most occupations are such that to perform their duties requires many motions. The cook can be kneading bread or grinding coffee. For this reason three guesses are necessary.

The Yule Log.

The Yule log is a great log of wood, sometimes the root of a tree, brought into the house with great ceremony on Christmas eve, laid in the fireplace and lighted with the brand of last year's log. While it lasts there are great singing, drinking and telling of tales. Sometimes it is accompanied with Christmas candles, but in the cottages the only light is from the glow of the log. The Yule log is burned all the night, and if it dies out it is considered a sign of great ill luck. The Yule log is yet burned in many farmhouses of England, particularly in the north, and there are many superstitions connected with it. If a squinting person comes into the house while it is burning or a person barefooted it is considered a bad omen. The brand remaining from the Yule log is carefully put away for next year's Christmas fire.

Meanings of Flowers.

Here are some of the flowers with their meanings:

[illegible]

A Christmas Game.

All the players except one, who is blindfolded, sit in a circle on the ground or in chairs. The blindfolded one walks around outside the circle, singing:

[illegible]

Then the singer stops, and the one behind whom he stands must answer in a concealed voice the name of some article. The blindfolded player must guess who the speaker is or try again. If he guesses aright that player must take his place.

Mistletoe.

The mistletoe is intimately connected with many of the superstitions of the Germans and the British. In the northern mythology Balder is said to have been slain by a spear made from a branch of mistletoe. The mistletoe is still hung up in farm houses and kitchens at Christmas and the young men have the privilege of kissing the girl under it, plucking each time a berry from the bush. When the berries are all plucked the privilege ceases.

Flower Basket.

Let each player choose the name of a flower, no two being alike. Then the hostess stands in the center of the circle of chairs on which the players are seated and calls some flower name three times quickly. The one who has the name must say it once before the leader has said it three times. If she fails then she becomes leader. When the leader says "Flower basket" then all the players quickly change places.

Conundrums.

Why is it dangerous to sleep in a steam car? Because the train runs over sleepers.

What should you do if you split your sides with laughter? Run until you get a stitch in them.

DEVIL BIRD HAS AWFUL CRY

Natives of Ceylon Are Not to Be Blamed for Being Terrified by Its Scream.

Of all the awe-inspiring sounds emitted by wild creatures, none, it is said, is to be compared to that of the "devil bird" of Ceylon, whose cry has been likened to the scream of a human being undergoing the most frightful torture. Naturalists have identified this bird with the brown wood-owl found in Hindustan.

The natives of Ceylon regard the cry of this bird with superstitious horror, for, it is claimed, its scream heard at night presages the most dire misfortunes.

Salt on French Roads.

As a general rule, the roads in and around French towns are turned at the commencement of the summer in order to abate the dust nuisance. It has, however, been found that tar, although excellent in the case of macadamized roads, is of little or no value where car lines exist and paved street crossings intersect the roads in every direction, as tarring cannot be carried out on stones.

The authorities, being their action on the well-known hygroscopic properties of common salt, have made a test of its value in laying the dust. Twenty yards of roadway have been sprinkled liberally with salt and then watered freely. If the results are satisfactory, salt will be used throughout the town of Havre, it being impossible to tar the majority of the streets, as they are paved with rough stone blocks.

TO REDUCE DEATH TOLLS TO MINIMUM

INVESTIGATION OF DANGER AUTHORIZED BY MEASURE

NECESSITY FOR FEDERAL INTERVENTION TO PROTECT LIFE AND PROPERTY IS BEING RECOGNIZED.

Washington, Dec. 16—Tucked away in an obscure paragraph in the executive, judicial and legislative appropriation bills is a provision which, if it succeeds in running the gauntlet of the national lawmakers, will allow the government can make an investigation of safety devices for electrical machinery and appliances for the purpose of reducing the appalling death tolls from that source to the minimum.

It authorizes the bureau of standards to conduct an investigation of the dangers to life and property due to the transmission of electric current of high potentials, and the precautions to be taken to obtain the best methods of construction, operation and installation to be allowed in the distribution of this current. It also provides that an investigation be instituted for the purpose of ascertaining the best means of protecting life and property from lightning.

The cost of this inquiry, which, it is expected, will last about a year, is set at $15,000. The insertion of the measure caused a sharp fight the conditions of workingmen, have on the floor of the house; but it was finally sustained.

The necessity of federal action to prevent annually great loss of life from high tension electric currents, has been greatly impressed upon congress. There is not only the human factor which statesmen have in mind, namely, to prevent death from electrocution, but also the property factor. The loss by electrolysis, that is the decaying of the metal in water mains and gas pipes, and other metallic contrivances is estimated to be very great; and a number of big public service corporations who are interested in this phase of the matter have appealed to the government to take up the inquiry. Labor union members of congress, as well as members who have been less conspicuous in their efforts to improve joined together to obtain the services of the bureau of standards in this work.

Another phase of inquiry which the bureau will be authorized to take up is that touching upon the fire-resisting qualities of building materials. The growth of big cities, with ever increasing density of population and constantly augmented height of factories and tenement houses, has made this a most serious problem. Increasing congestion in cities it is argued, is practically unavoidable. Fire-proof construction, a thorough knowledge of fire-resisting materials is essential. Municipal governments and building officials are said to need this information most urgently. At present it is obtainable only in a scattered way, and without any general purpose of establishing the underlying principles.

Furthermore, it is argued that government tests are free from the criticisms of favoritism which handicaps private experiments.

ECONOMY IS INJURING THIS STATE

UNDISTRIBUTED MAIL IS DUMPED ON STATE CLERKS

RESULT OF POLICY OF POSTOFFICE DEPARTMENT IS THAT FLORIDA PEOPLE GET THEIR MAIL LATE.

JACKSONVILLE, Dec. 18 — Mr. Hitchcock's "economy of operation policy" is being severely felt in the Florida postal service, especially in the railroad branch of the great system.

It is reported a solid car of undistributed Florida mail, most of it second class, was received from Atlanta one night this week at the terminal station here, to be "worked" by the already overworked mail clerks on the various railroads of the state, reaching its destination at least 24 hours late. In addition to this, it is said, it has become the habit of railway mail clerks on the roads north of here to leave undistributed Florida mail for this terminal, until their arrival here, when hours and sometimes a whole day, had to be spent in the car working up Florida mail — all because there were not clerks enough on the great trunk lines from the north and west to handle and distribute mails for this state.

The result was that in addition to the delay resulting from sent to the destination, there was no time to clean out the cars for the return trip, and put them in "sanitary condition" required by act of congress, and railway mail clerks complained of the condition of the cars in which they were compelled to work. This matter is reported to have been taken up with the terminal authorities here, with the result that they are said to have put the matter up to the mail authorities in Washington, and there it rests. It is not known how soon it will be, if ever, before the Florida mail will be given a fair chance to reach its destination.

Following this policy, it is stated that crowded passenger cars being put on the trunk lines of Florida railways mail for that city, to be work and sent back north, which is said to be a very serious matter, leaving it to reach destination.

Second class mail on the East Coast has been worked by crowded crews on trains to Pensacola, Tampa, or the other part of the western side of the state, and is charged, simply because it is impossible to handle it on the route it should take in its unworked condition.

It is not the fault of the local office, nor is it the fault of the Florida railway clerks; neither can it be said the clerks in charge of the railway mails from the north are guilty of neglect or carelessness in this matter.

Sifted down, it is learned that the shortage of railway mail clerks throughout the whole system is to blame.

Car dimensions have been cut down, crews have been reduced in number, and, in the alleged effort to save a dollar, the whole postal railway mail service, of this part of the country, at least, has suffered. This is not because of the movement of the special heavy Christmas mail, for that has started yet. In fact, the order for double duty to mail clerks on the railroads does not call for double work until December 17th, and then it covers only the time through the 26th.

It is said that now winter visitors to this state who want to keep in communication through their papers, with their home towns, have the pleasure of reading the papers after their arrival from three to four days old, instead of 24 to 36 hours old, owing to their having to be sent just anywhere to be pocked for distribution. What the result will be when the parcels post becomes operative in about three weeks cannot be figured out down here, as this section of the country has received no preparation for handling the bulky stuff that naturally will follow the opening of the service beyond the furnishing of scales and stamps, which, as being registered, have added that much more to the congestion prevailing. Certain it is that no additional trained men are reported to have appeared on the scene, nor has the capacity of the mail cars been increased, nor additional space provided at any of the postoffices, from all that can be learned.

SMITH CREEK BRIDGE CLOSED FOR REPAIRS

RENEWING OF FOUNDATIONS THE WORK IN PROGRESS — WILL CONSUME BALANCE OF THIS WEEK OR LONGER.

County Commissioner William Jackson states for the benefit of the public, automobile people particularly, that the Smith creek bridge will be closed today and for the balance of the week, or until the work of putting in new foundations has been completed, this being the repair work in progress. This is the bridge over Smith creek on the John Anderson highway between this city and St. Augustine, traveled by automobiles on their way south from Jacksonville to points down the East Coast and quite a detour is necessary while this bridge is out of commission.

31 MINERS ENTOMBED BY EXPLOSION IN GERMANY

RESCUERS DRIVEN BACK BY GAS AND INDICATIONS ARE THAT ALL MEN IN WORKINGS ARE DEAD.

DORTMUND, Germany, Dec. 18—By an explosion in the Scharnhorst colliery today 31 miners were been entombed in the workings. Rescuers began an effort at once to reach the entombed men, but were driven back by the gas. Indications are that all of the men are dead.

HOLLY HILL COUPLE WEDDED IN KINGSTON.

Miss Ina Clifton and Walter Carter were married at Kingston Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock, by Rev. E. Gilbert Schwartz, in Kingston, Rev. Mr. Schwartz officiating. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's father, Holly Hill, the bride being a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Clifton and the groom a son of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Carter. The young couple will make their home in Daytona, occupying a cottage on Ridgewood avenue.

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 16—John Cannon, aged 69 years, for many years a member of the fire department in this city, committed suicide today by drinking carbolic acid. The cause is unknown.

Refects Ultra Violet.

Prof. J. von Kowalski, in a letter to Nature (London), describes his observations of the spectra of sunlight reflected by snowfields in Switzerland. He finds that the ultra-violet rays are reflected far more closely in their entireties. This fact helps to explain the trying effects of snow light upon the eyes, and suggests the advisability of wearing blue glasses in the glare of snow and sunshine, glasses that are opaque to the ultra-violet rays.

Paint in Japan.

It is estimated that Japan consumes $15,000,000 worth of paint annually. About 85 per cent. of this total is imported. Japan also has a paint making factory, with a capital of $500,000.

NEW TALES THAT ARE TOLD

When Melba's Music Won.

Tourists abroad dread few things so much as the customs inquisition. Of all the ports at which the unfortunate travelers are bothered with customs officers Toulon is one of the worst.

The mail steamer from Australia arrived there just after dusk one day.

A lady sat disconsolately on a box waiting for the mercurial officials to examine some ten trunks heaped upon

"MADAME," EXCLAIMED THE OFFICIAL, "MADAME WHO?"

the customs platform. They talked, they laughed, they gesticulated, but the trunks remained untouched.

"It won't be long now, madame," a gentleman said reassuringly to the lonely looking woman.

"Don't it awful!" she remarked.

An official pricked up his ears. The voice had familiar tones. A little cascade of notes succeeded, escaped from her mouth. He was erect, alert.

"Madame!" he ejaculated, "madame who?"

"Mine, Melba," was the reply.

In ten seconds the trunks were cleared.—Paris Letter to New York Sun.

Classified Golf Clubs as Agricultural Implements.

"One of the first men I ever played golf with was Cleveland Dodge," said Woodrow Wilson, before he sailed for Bermuda. "Neither Mr. Dodge nor myself had more than a theoretical knowledge of the game, and our first enthusiasm was very great.

"The weather was cold Friday, that we hadn't the right sort of clothes, and we had to stop.

"So we went to Bermuda and got an hour of the finest golf that that island could offer. There was no in-door golf there, of course. When we reached the customs officer in Boston and he asked us what we had to declare, we said we had golf in Bermuda and Mr. Dodge and I had to pay duty on our golf clubs. Finally they seized us there as agricultural implements.

"Dodge and I had to pay duty on the links with the new clubs. When he returned did with he had charged his mind.

"Those customs officers know more about the game I thought I did," said he.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

Time to Change.

Inspector James I. Hughes of the Toronto board of education was illustrating the differences in child minds at a lecture before the City club of Chicago. "I have a little girl whose tastes are strongly mathematical, while her brother has no gift for numbers, but still manages to think quite clearly. My daughter was speculating on the degrees of relationship of her two half sisters, Jane and Helen, and of other possible combinations in fractional sisterhood and brotherhood. 'Papa,' she asked, 'if mother were to die and you were to marry again and have some more children, what kin would they be to Jane and Helen? Would they be half sisters too?' I had not replied when my small son volunteered an answer after his own kind. 'I think,' he said, 'if anybody's going to die, it's papa's turn this time'"—Everybody's Magazine.

Wanted—An Optimist.

A fifth avenue man had been trying to dig up some literary work for a literary friend, and he finally found a publisher who asked favorably.

"Yes," said the publisher, "I can give your friend literary work."

"Thanks! He's a good man."

"But hold on! Is he an optimist or a pessimist?"

"What difference does that make?"

"Makes a deal of difference. I can't use a pessimist. I want a man to edit a spring seed catalogue."

Salt on French Roads.

As a general rule, the roads in and around French towns are tarred at the commencement of the summer in order to abate the dust nuisance. It has, however, been found that tar, although excellent in the case of macadamized roads, is of little or no value where car lines exist and paved street crossings intersect the roads in every direction, as tarring cannot be carried out on stones.

The authorities, basing their action on the well-known hygrometrical properties of common salt, have made a test of its value in laying the dust. Twenty yards of roadway have been sprinkled liberally with salt and then watered freely. If the results are satisfactory, salt will be used throughout the town of Havre, it being impossible to tar the majority of the streets, as they are paved with rough stone blocks.

TO REDUCE DEATH TOLLS TO MINIMUM

INVESTIGATION OF DANGER AUTHORIZED BY MEASURE

NECESSITY FOR FEDERAL INTERVENTION TO PROTECT LIFE AND PROPERTY IS BEING RECOGNIZED.

Washington, Dec. 18—Tucked away in an obscure paragraph in the executive, judicial and legislative appropriation bills is a provision which, if it succeeds in running the gauntlet of the national lawmakers, will allow the government can make an investigation of safety devices for electrical machinery and appliances for the purpose of reducing the appalling death tolls from that source to the minimum.

It authorizes the bureau of standards to conduct an investigation of the dangers to life and property due to the transmission of electric current at high potentials, and the precautions to be taken to obtain the best methods of construction, operation and installation to be allowed in the distribution of this current. It also provides that an investigation be instituted for the purpose of ascertaining the best means of protecting life and property from lightning.

The cost of this inquiry, which, it is expected, will last about a year, is set at $15,000. The insertion of the measure caused a sharp fight the conditions of workingmen, have on the floor of the house; but it was finally sustained.

The necessity of federal action to prevent annually great loss of life from high tension electric currents, has been greatly impressed upon congress. There is not only the human factor which statesmen have in mind, namely, to prevent death from electrocution, but also the property factor. The loss by electrolysis, that is the decaying of the metal in water mains and gas pipes, and other metallic contrivances is estimtaed to be very great; and a number of big public service corporations who are interested in this phase of the matter have appealed to the government to take up the inquiry. Labor union members of congress, as well as members who have been less conspicuous in their efforts to improve joined together to obtain the services of the bureau of standards, in this work.

Another phase of inquiry which the bureau will be authorized to take up is that touching upon the fire-resisting qualities of building materials. The growth of big cities, with ever increasing density of population and constantly augmented height of factories and tenement houses, has made this a most serious problem. Increasing congestion in cities it is argued, is practically unavoidable. Fire-resisting construction, a thorough knowledge of fire-resisting materials is essential. Municipal governments and building officials are said to need this information most urgently. At present it is obtainable only in a scattered way, and without any general purpose of establishing the underlying principles.

Furthermore, it is argued that government tests are free from the criticisms of favoritism which handcaps private experiments.

ECONOMY IS INJURING THIS STATE

UNDISTRIBUTED MAIL IS DUMPED ON STATE CLERKS

RESULT OF POLICY OF POSTOFFICE DEPARTMENT IS THAT FLORIDA PEOPLE GET THEIR MAIL LATE.

JACKSONVILLE, Dec. 18 — Mr. Hitchcock's "economy of operation policy" is being severely felt in the Florida postal service, especially in the railroad branch of the great system.

It is reported a solid car of undistributed Florida mail, most of it second class, was received from Atlanta one night this week at the terminal station here, to be "worked" by the already overworked mail clerks on the various railroads of the state, reaching its destination at least 24 hours late. In addition to this, it is said, it has become the habit of railway mail clerks on the roads north of here to leave undistributed Florida mail for this terminal, until their arrival here, when hours and sometimes a whole day, had to be spent in the car working up Florida mail — all because there were not clerks enough on the great trunk lines from the north and west to handle and distribute mails for this state.

The result was that in addition to the delay in getting out mail to its destination, there was no time to clean out the cars for the return trip, and put them in "sanitary condition" required by act of congress, and railway mail clerks complained of the condition of the cars in which they were compelled to work. This matter is reported to have been taken up with the terminal authorities here, with the result that they are said to have put the matter strictly up to the mail authorities and besides, have issued an order that all mail cars be vacated in 30 minutes after arrival in the Jacksonville terminal.

Following this order, it is reported that unworked pouches are being put on any train not having a heavy mail for that trip, to be worked and sent back, often to this place, for delivery to clerks, carrying it to proper destination.

Second class mail for the East Coast has been worked by crowded crews on trains to Pensacola, Tampa, or any other part of the western side of the state, it is claimed, simply because it is impossible to handle it on the route it should take in its unworked condition.

It is not the fault of the local office, nor is it the fault of the Florida railway clerks; neither can it be said the clerks in charge of the railway mails from the north are guilty of neglect or carelessness in this matter.

Sifted down, it is learned that the shortage of railway mail clerks throughout the whole system is to blame.

Car dimensions have been cut down, crews have been reduced in number, and, in the alleged effort to save a dollar, the whole postal railway mail service, of this part of the country, at least, has suffered. This is not because of the movement of the usual heavy Christmas mail, for that has not started yet. In fact, the order for double duty to mail clerks on the railroads does not call for double work until December 19th, and then it covers only the time through the 26th.

It is said that now winter visitors to this state who want to keep in communication through their papers, with their home towns, have the pleasure of reading the papers after they are from three to four days old, instead of 24 to 36 hours old, owing to their having to be sent just anywhere to be pouched for distribution. What the result will be when the parcels post becomes operative in about three weeks cannot be figured out down here, as this section of the country has received no preparation for handling the bulky stuff that naturally will follow the opening of the service beyond the furnishing of scales and stamps, which, all being registered, have added that much more to the congestion prevailing. Certain it is that no additional trained men are reported to have appeared on the scene, nor has the capacity of the mail cars been increased, nor additional space provided at any of the postoffices, from all that can be learned.

SMITH CREEK BRIDGE CLOSED FOR REPAIRS

RENEWING OF FOUNDATIONS THE WORK IN PROGRESS — WILL CONSUME BALANCE OF THIS WEEK OR LONGER.

County Commissioner William Jackson states for the benefit of the public, automobile people particularly, that the Smith creek bridge will be closed today and for the balance of the week, or until the work of putting in new foundations has been completed, this being the repair work in progress. This is the bridge over Smith creek on the John Anderson highway between this city and St. Augustine, traveled by automobiles on their way south from Jacksonville to points down the East Coast and quite a detour is necessary while this bridge is out of commission.

Reflects Ultra-Violet.

Prof. J. von Kowalski, in a letter to Nature (London), describes his observations of the spectra of sunlight reflected by snowfields in Switzerland. He finds that the ultra-violet rays are reflected by snow almost in their entirety. This fact helps to explain the trying effects of such light upon the eyes, and suggests the advisability of wearing, during a period of snow and sunshine, glasses that are opaque to the ultra-violet rays.

It is estimated that Japan consumes $15,000,000 worth of paint annually. About 85 per cent. of this total is imported. Japan also has a paint making factory, with a capital of $500,000.

NEW TALES THAT ARE TOLD

When Melba's Music Won.

Tourists abroad dread few things so much as the customs inquisition. Of all the ports at which the unfortunate traveler has to bother with customs officers Toulon is one of the worst.

The mail steamer from Australia arrived there just after dusk one day.

A lady sat disconsolately on a box waiting for the mercurial officials to examine some ten trunks heaped upon

"MADAME," EJACULATED THE OFFICIAL, "MADAME WHO?"

the customs platform. They talked, they laughed, they gesticulated, but the trunks remained untouched.

"It won't be long now, madame," a gentleman said reassuringly to the lonely looking woman.

"Isn't it sinful?" she remarked.

An official pricked up his ears. The voice had familiar tones. A little cascade of notes unconsciously escaped from her mouth. He was erect, alert.

"Madame!" he ejaculated, "madame who?"

"Mme. Melba," was the reply.

In ten seconds the trunks were cleared.—Paris Letter to New York Sun.

Classified Golf Clubs as Agricultural Implements.

"One of the first men I ever played golf with was Cleveland Dodge," said Woodrow Wilson just before he sailed for Bermuda. "Neither Mr. Dodge nor myself had more than a theoretical knowledge of the game, and our first performances were unique.

"'The trouble is,' said Dodge, 'that we haven't the right sort of clubs. I'll import some.'

"So he sent to Scotland and got an invoice of the finest golf clubs that money could buy. There was an instrument for every possible golfing contingency. When they reached the custom house the officials did not know how to classify them. They knew almost as little about golf as Dodge and myself, and there had been no provision made in the law for an import duty on golf clubs. Finally they levied on them as agricultural implements.

"'That,' said Dodge, 'is a deliberate insult.'

"The next day he went on the links with his new clubs. When he returned that night he had changed his mind.

"'Those customs officers knew more about the game I play than I did,' said he."—Cincinnati Times-Star.

Time to Change.

Inspector James I. Hughes of the Toronto board of education was illustrating the differences in child minds at a lecture before the City club of Chicago. "I have a little girl whose tastes are strongly mathematical, while her brother has no gift for numbers, but still manages to think quite clearly. My daughter was speculating on the degrees of relationship of her two half sisters, Jane and Helen, and on other possible combinations in fractional sisterhood and brotherhood. 'Papa,' she asked, 'if mother were to die and you were to marry again and have some more children, what kin would they be to Jane and Helen? Would they be half sisters too?' I had not replied when my small son volunteered an answer after his own kind. 'I think,' he said, 'if anybody's going to die, it's papa's turn this time.'"—Everybody's Magazine.

MRS. TOPHAM'S INVENTION

A New Year's Resolution

By MILDRED JERNIGAN

The Tophams grew poorer every year. On the 1st day of January Samuel Topham registered a solemn vow that on the very next day he would set forth in quest of work for the ensuing year—work that would bring him in a steady income with which to support his growing family. On the 2d day of January Mr. Topham usually had a brilliant idea—a brain splitting conception of a patent dishwashing machine or a baby tender that might take the place of a paid nursemaid, or an automatic flapjack griddle which not only would grease itself, but would also tip a suspended pitcher of batter so that one might have a continuous succession of well browned flapjacks as fast as one could remove them from the self greasing, nonburning, self adjusting griddle. Anything in the way of a work saver or labor eliminator appealed to the inventive faculty of Samuel Topham.

As these ideas attacked Samuel on the second day of the new year, of course he then abandoned the idea of seeking manual labor and devoted himself exclusively to the perfecting of this latest patent. Under these circumstances it became necessary for Mrs. Topham to find some means of supplying her husband and seven little daughters with food and clothing. This she did by home baking. She did it cheerfully and without complaint, for the Tophams, great and small, had infinite faith in "pa's" inventions and contentedly scrimped and saved so that one day all of them might live sumptuously on the proceeds of his successes when it should really come to pass.

On this particular New Year's morning Samuel had registered his customary vow with more than his accustomed vigor.

"There's no use talking, Sarah," he said, sinking heavily into a kitchen chair and looking appealingly at his plump little wife from his prominent light blue eyes. "I haven't got the heart to see you go through another year like the last. Tomorrow morning I shall set out and find a job, something that will at least bring us in bread and cheese."

"You've said that before, Sam," returned Sarah placidly. "You haven't got to worry about that. I'm making enough from my baking to pay the grocer and butcher, and we can wear our old clothes for a little while longer. I am sure the automatic griddle will be a money maker. Why, whenever I feel extra tired I just think how easy we will have it when that automatic griddle is on the market and you"—

Samuel lifted a fat hand and shook his head sadly. "I'm afraid that the automatic griddle is not a success," he announced in a hollow voice.

"Not—a—success?" Sarah Topham's voice showed more genuine dismay than it had done in the case of the failure of the dishwasher and the baby tender, which had been the last two inventions of her husband's restless brain. Now she removed her hands from a bowl of flour and surveyed Samuel's gloomy countenance with a severe look on her usually good natured face. "You have heard something new?" she asked.

"Yes. I had a letter—a most peculiarly worded letter—from Mr. Simmons," admitted Samuel, taking an envelope from his pocket and surveying the superscription mournfully.

"Well, what did he say, Samuel? You know you asked him for a candid opinion of its merits. He's your second cousin and ought not to be afraid to speak right out."

"He spoke right out," muttered Samuel bitterly.

"What did he say?"

"He said," returned Samuel reluctantly, "that no one except an unmitigated idiot and a constitutionally lazy and shiftless loafer would ever have spent a year of God's good time in perfecting such a fool's idea as my automatic griddle. I believe you might call that a candid opinion."

"Why—the—idea!" gasped Sarah Topham angrily.

"I shall seek a job tomorrow," went on Samuel weakly.

He was surprised at his wife's prompt reply. "It's a good idea, Samuel," she said energetically. "I'm afraid that we haven't capital enough to wait until the griddle is a success."

[illegible]

"Ho—hum!" sighed Samuel, filling his pipe and reaching for the morning newspaper. It was necessary for Samuel to subscribe to a New York daily paper in order to keep track of the latest inventions of other creative brains. "I must go out and look for a job of some kind tomorrow. If my eyes didn't trouble me so much I'd try bookkeeping, but what's the use? I believe Sarah has a boiled dinner today. Well, I'm glad of that. If there's one thing I enjoy it is an old fashioned boiled dinner."

Evidences of the dinner of corned beef and cabbage permeated the little house from front to back. Mr. Topham leaned back in his chair and smoked easily and read the paper from beginning to end, not even omitting the "want" columns, which were painfully suggestive of work.

In the kitchen Sarah Topham flew around from table to stove, to sink and pantry and back to table again. There was a high color in her cheeks, and her blue eyes flashed strangely as she went to and fro, preparing the great dinner, filling in gaps of time with the making of a cake or a batch of biscuit for the customers who were only too glad to buy her toothsome wares.

A knock came at the back door, followed by the anxious face of her nearest neighbor, Mrs. Morris.

"I'm in a heap of trouble, Mrs. Topham," began the visitor, sinking into a chair, "and when I smelled your boiled dinner I wondered if you wouldn't help me out."

"What is it?" asked Sarah practically.

"You know we never have dinner at noon on Saturday; I always wait and have it when William comes home at 7 o'clock. Today I only had a few sandwiches for lunch, because I'm going down to my sister's to dinner tonight, and William will meet me there. Not five minutes ago I had a telephone call from the depot saying that my aunt and her husband and their four children are passing through here on their way to Westlake and will be at my house at dinner time; that's fifteen minutes, and I haven't got a mouthful in the house to eat, and they are great providers and have regular farm appetites. Would you sell me your dinner?"

Sarah puckered her brow an instant and then it cleared. "Yes, of course," she said sensibly. "Shall I dish it up for you, or will you carry the pots over? I've got a pot of potatoes boiled separately."

"I'll take the pots over. Have you got a pie to spare?"

"Yes," said Sarah calmly, bringing the last pie in the house and folding it in a clean napkin. "Want any help?"

"No, indeed. I've got time to run back and forth. I'm a thousand times obliged to you, Mrs. Topham. I'll bring my pocketbook over next trip."

At 12:30 Sarah Topham called her seven little girls in to dinner, and, as this was the signal for Samuel to also appear at the table, they all gathered about the board together.

The little girls clapped their hands over a great dish of boiled rice and a huge pitcher of milk that formed the principal dishes on the table.

The face of Samuel Topham was a study in disappointment when he surveyed the plain meal. Sarah avoided his eyes and poured out two cups of tea.

"You've forgotten the boiled dinner," he ventured rather timidly.

"Oh, no; there isn't any boiled dinner," returned Sarah calmly. "I sold it to Mrs. Morris. She had unexpected company."

"Sold the dinner! Are we to eat this—this?" Mr. Topham's voice was the quintessence of disgust.

"Of course. It's very nourishing, Samuel. You know the Japanese live almost entirely upon rice and fish. They whipped the Russians, you know."

"I know. But I'm hungry, Sarah."

"If you eat rice enough, Samuel, I'm sure you will get along. I've been thinking that we would live entirely on rice until the automatic griddle is a success. Rice is cheap and we need all I can earn for"—

"Oh, very well, Sarah, you needn't explain any further," said Samuel, with great dignity, and forthwith attacked his rice and milk gravely.

All the afternoon he spent in moody meditation before the air tight stove in the parlor. He did not see his wife slip quietly out of the side door and hasten down the street and turn into the wide driveway of Moses Bowman's hardware house. He did not see her when she returned with flushed cheeks and resumed her work in the kitchen.

"Rice for supper, too?" he asked dismally at 6 o'clock that night.

"Yes, indeed. I'm greatly taken with the idea, Samuel," cried his wife enthusiastically. "Let us live upon rice and milk until one of your inventions is perfected. I'm sure the children are willing to do it."

Mr. Topham said nothing at all in reply, and when the meal was concluded he put on his hat and left the house. It was significant that he turned into the Moses Bowman place.

At 9 he returned to find Sarah dozing sleepily before the fire.

"I've got a job, Sarah," he said as a bashful voice. "Moses Bowman wants he will give me a job in the store as [illegible] bookkeeper. I'm [illegible] to work Monday morning. I [illegible] and [illegible] wonder [illegible] I don't suppose there ever will be an invention to equal rice, eh?"

"I don't know about that," said Sarah Topham to herself as she looked at the [illegible] he had intended to introduce into [illegible] food. "I don't know about that. I've an invention of my own that would make me a millionaire—if I could get it on the market, but I guess I'll have to give it to my daughters for wedding gifts some day. I guess I'll call it 'Sarah Topham's Automatic Genius Cure,' for it certainly will make a man work when nothing else appeals to him. Starve 'em out, I say. That's my invention!"

SELECT CULLINGS

Objects to Killing Himself.

The doctor who attended the emperor of Japan in his last illness is finding himself in difficulties because he will not satisfy the demands of that circle in Tokyo which still clings to old ideas, says a Paris cable to the New York Times. These persons, who have been much impressed by General Nogi's suicide, demand that the doctor also shall kill himself, but he declines to do so. It has been explained to him that he will be held in dishonor if he does not follow the example of Nogi, but all the persuasion and indignation leave him unmoved. "It was not my fault," he says, "if the emperor died." He has declared in several journals that he was unable to attend the mikado as he should have done owing to the court etiquette and added that if the emperor had followed his advice and abstained from alcoholic drinks he would still be alive.

Rose Perfume From Paraffin.

However absurd it may seem it is certain that essence of roses may be manufactured from paraffin. The profits offered by this industry are evident at once if one considers that the pure essence of roses is sold at 40 cents a drop for the best. As the essence is fully as popular as it is expensive, the majority of the preparations that are sold in the name of "essence of roses" are nothing but imitations and not always good ones. The latest product was discovered by accident on the congealing of paraffin with liquid air. As the paraffin solidified it was observed that there floated over the surface an unknown liquid containing a new perfume. This perfume when refined was to all intents and purposes "essence of roses." Besides the essence of roses, other perfumes have been obtained by a special process.—Harper's.

Tipping the Hat at Harvard.

Everybody tips his hat at Harvard these days. The custom has been growing gradually for several years, and it is now in full bloom. Every student of the university—and there are over 5,000 of them—tips his hat to President Lowell when he meets him on the street or in the yard, and the chief executive of Harvard returns the silent greeting in like manner. The students universally recognize Dean Le Baron Russell Briggs and Dean Byron S. Hurlbut and several other widely known members of the Harvard faculty by tipping the hat. Students in the courses at the college are expected to tip their hats to the professors or assistant professors whether they know them personally or not. The line is drawn against the instructors, however.—Boston Post.

Time For a Typhoid Crusade.

More fatal and communicable than the dreaded bubonic plague is typhoid fever. A filth disease, it can be gotten rid of wholly. Yet New York, with its boasted prophylaxis, has more cases today, proportionally to population, than the cities of Europe, pest ridden of old, had a score of years ago. A monograph by Charles F. Bolduan, M. D., of the department of health, shows Berlin with 9.1 deaths per 100,000 in 1890, and Vienna with 9.4, as compared with 11.0 deaths in New York during 1911, the same number in Boston, and 13.7 in Chicago. Berlin and Vienna, during 1911, numbered but 3.6 and 4.1 deaths, respectively, from typhoid.—New York Tribune.

Eiffel Tower Rises and Sinks.

The remarkable discovery has been made that the Eiffel tower sinks over an inch into the ground in certain atmospherical conditions, rising again later to the normal state. It was known that the tower swayed horizontally to the extent of several centimeters, and M. Guillaume of the Academy of Science conceived the idea of stretching a piece of wire from the second story to the ground. Leaving the wire taut, he found that twice after storms it had loosened to the extent of an inch or more. Further investigations have shown that the tower sinks several hours before the approach of stormy weather. In other words, the great structure is an admirable barometer.

Montenegro's Capital.

Cettinje, from whence issued the fiat of war, is the smallest capital in Europe, its population numbering only a little over 3,000. It stands on a rather dreary plain, surrounded by mountains and from a distance resembles a straggling French village with its one street, red tiled houses clustering around half a dozen larger buildings and two church spires. [illegible]

Lifting Pig Iron.

[illegible] It has been found that by this method the lifting capacity of a magnet which heretofore was able to raise only 1,000 pounds of pig iron was increased to 2,000 pounds.—Chicago Tribune.

MRS. TOPHAM'S INVENTION

A New Year's Resolution

By MILDRED JERNEGAN

The Tophams grew poorer every year. On the 1st day of January Samuel Topham registered a solemn vow that on the very next day he would set forth in quest of work for the ensuing year—work that would bring him in a steady income with which to support his growing family. On the 2d day of January Mr. Topham usually had a brilliant idea—a brain splitting conception of a patent dishwashing machine or a baby tender that might take the place of a paid nursemaid, or an automatic flapjack griddle which not only would grease itself, but would also tip a suspended pitcher of batter so that one might have a continuous succession of well browned flapjacks as fast as one could remove them from the self greasing, nonburning, self adjusting griddle. Anything in the way of a work saver or labor eliminator appealed to the inventive faculty of Samuel Topham.

As these ideas attacked Samuel on the second day of the new year, of course he then abandoned the idea of seeking manual labor and devoted himself exclusively to the perfecting of this latest patent. Under these circumstances it became necessary for Mrs. Topham to find some means of supplying her husband and seven little daughters with food and clothing. This she did by home baking. She did it cheerfully and without complaint, for the Tophams, great and small, had infinite faith in "pa's" inventions and contentedly scrimped and saved so that one day all of them might live sumptuously on the proceeds of his success—when it should really come to pass.

On this particular New Year's morning Samuel had registered his customary vow with more than his accustomed vigor.

"There's no use talking, Sarah," he said, sinking heavily into a kitchen chair and looking appealingly at his plump little wife from his prominent light blue eyes, "I haven't got the heart to see you go through another year like the last. Tomorrow morning I shall set out and find a job, something that will at least bring us in bread and cheese."

"You've said that before, Sam," returned Sarah placidly. "You haven't got to worry about that. I'm making enough from my baking to pay the grocer and butcher, and we can wear our old clothes for a little while longer. I am sure the automatic griddle will be a money maker. Why, whenever I feel extra tired I just think how easy we will have it when that automatic griddle is on the market and you"—

Samuel lifted a fat hand and shook his head sadly. "I'm afraid that the automatic griddle is not a success," he announced in a hollow voice.

"Not—a—success?" Sarah Topham's voice showed more genuine dismay than it had done in the case of the failure of the dishwasher and the baby tender, which had been the last two inventions of her husband's restless brain. Now she removed her hands from a bowl of flour and surveyed Samuel's gloomy countenance with a severe look on her usually good natured face. "You have heard something new?" she asked.

"Yes. I had a letter—a most peculiarly worded letter—from Mr. Bowman," admitted Samuel, taking an envelope from his pocket and surveying the superscription resentfully.

"Well, what did he say, Samuel? You know you asked him for a candid opinion of its merits. He's your second cousin and ought not to be afraid to speak right out."

"He spoke right out," muttered Samuel bitterly.

"What did he say?"

"He said," returned Samuel reluctantly, "that no one except an unmitigated idiot and a constitutionally lazy and shiftless loafer would ever have spent a year of God's good time in perfecting such a fool's idea as my automatic griddle. I believe you might call that a candid opinion."

"Why—the—idea!" gasped Sarah Topham angrily.

"I shall seek a job tomorrow," went on Samuel weakly.

He was surprised at his wife's prompt reply. "It's a good idea, Samuel," she said energetically. "I'm afraid that we haven't capital enough to wait until the griddle is a success."

"Of course, Sarah, when you lose faith in me I must go to the wall," said Samuel Topham with dignity, and so, folding the frankly written letter of his second cousin, the inventor left the kitchen and strolled into the parlor of the cottage, where his morris chair was drawn before a glowing little air tight stove.

From the window he could see his seven diminutive daughters coasting down the hill that sloped from their cottage to the highroad. He sighed deeply. If his wonderful schemes had only carried out successfully these seven daughters would each be an heiress, wearing rich fur coats and ermine hoods instead of bright little red caps and cloaks fashioned by Sarah's busy hands.

"Ha—hum!" sighed Samuel, filling his pipe and reaching for the morning newspaper. It was necessary for Samuel to subscribe to a New York daily paper in order to keep track of the latest inventions of other creative brains. "I must go out and look for a job of some kind tomorrow. If my eyes didn't trouble me so much I'd try bookkeeping, but what's the use? I believe Sarah has a boiled dinner to day. Well, I'm glad of that. If there's one thing I enjoy it is an old fashioned boiled dinner."

Evidences of the dinner of corned beef and cabbage permeated the little house from front to back. Mr. Topham leaned back in his chair and smoked easily and read the paper from beginning to end, not even omitting the "want" columns, which were painfully suggestive of work.

In the kitchen Sarah Topham flew around from table to stove, to sink and pantry and back to table again. There was a high color in her cheeks, and her blue eyes flashed strangely as she went to and fro, preparing the good dinner, filling in gaps of time with the making of a cake or a batch of biscuit for the customers who were only too glad to buy her toothsome wares.

A knock came at the back door, followed by the anxious face of her nearest neighbor, Mrs. Morris.

"I'm in a heap of trouble, Mrs. Topham," began the visitor, sinking into a chair, "and when I smelled your boiled dinner I wondered if you wouldn't help me out."

"What is it?" asked Sarah practically.

"You know we never have dinner at noon on Saturday; I always wait and have it when William comes home at 7 o'clock. Today I only had a few sandwiches for lunch, because I'm going down to my sister's to dinner tonight, and William will meet me there. Not five minutes ago I had a telephone call from the depot saying that my aunt and her husband and their four children are passing through here on their way to Westlake and will be at my house at dinner time; that's fifteen minutes, and I haven't got a mouthful in the house to eat, and they are great providers and have regular farm appetites. Would you sell me your dinner?"

Sarah puckered her brow an instant and then it cleared. "Yes, of course," she said sensibly. "Shall I dish it up for you, or will you carry the pots over? I've got a pot of potatoes boiled separately."

"I'll take the pots over. Have you got a pie to spare?"

"Yes," said Sarah calmly, bringing the last pie in the house and folding it in a clean napkin. "Want any help?"

"No, indeed. I've got time to run back and forth. I'm a thousand times obliged to you, Mrs. Topham. I'll bring my pocketbook over next trip."

At 12:30 Sarah Topham called her seven little girls in to dinner, and, as this was the signal for Samuel to also appear at the table, they all gathered about the board together.

The little girls clapped their hands over a great dish of boiled rice and a huge pitcher of milk that formed the principal dishes on the table.

The face of Samuel Topham was a study in disappointment when he surveyed the plain meal. Sarah avoided his eyes and poured out two cups of tea.

"You've forgotten the boiled dinner," he ventured rather timidly.

"Oh, no; there isn't any boiled dinner," returned Sarah calmly. "I sold it to Mrs. Morris. She had unexpected company."

"Sold the dinner? Are we to eat this—rice?" Mr. Topham's voice was eloquent of disgust.

"Of course. It's very nourishing, Samuel. You know the Japanese live almost entirely upon rice and fish. They whipped the Russians, you know."

"I know. But I'm hungry, Sarah."

"If you eat rice enough, Samuel, I'm sure you can get along. I've been thinking that we would live entirely on rice until the automatic griddle is a success. Rice is cheap, and we need all I can earn to"—

"Oh, very well, Sarah, you needn't explain any further," said Samuel, with great dignity, and forthwith attacked his rice and milk gloomily.

All the afternoon he spent in moody cogitation before the air tight stove in the parlor. He did not see his wife slip quietly out of the side door and hasten down the street and turn into the wide driveway of Moses Bowman's handsome home. He did not see her when she returned with flushed cheeks and resumed her work in the kitchen.

"Rice for supper, too?" he asked dismally at 6 o'clock that night.

"Yes, indeed. I'm greatly taken with the idea, Samuel," cried his wife enthusiastically. "Let us live upon rice and milk until one of your inventions is perfected. I'm sure the children are willing to do it."

Mr. Topham said nothing at all in reply, and when the meal was concluded he put on his hat and left the house. It was significant that he, too, turned into the Moses Bowman place.

At 9 he returned to find Sarah darning stockings before the fire.

"I've got a job, Sarah," he said in a heartbroken voice. "Moses Bowman says he will give me a life job in his office as assistant bookkeeper. I've taken it and go to work Monday morning. I can't live on rice and milk whether the world loses flapjack griddles or not. I don't suppose there ever will be an invention to equal that one."

"I don't know about that," said Sarah Topham to herself as she broiled a steak she had secreted to celebrate this anticipated event. "I don't know about that. I've an invention of my own that would make me a millionairess if I could get it on the market, but I guess I'll have to give it to my daughters for wedding gifts some day. I guess I'll call it 'Sarah Topham's Automatic Genius Cure,' for it certainly will make a man work when nothing else appeals to him. Starve 'em out, I say. That's my invention!"

SELECT CULLINGS

Objects to Killing Himself.

The doctor who attended the emperor of Japan in his last illness is finding himself in difficulties because he will not satisfy the demands of that circle in Tokyo which still clings to old ideas, says a Paris cable to the New York Times. These persons, who have been much impressed by General Nogi's suicide, demand that the doctor also shall kill himself, but he declines to do so. It has been explained to him that he will be held in dishonor if he does not follow the example of Nogi, but all the persuasion and indignation leave him unmoved. "It was not my fault," he says, "if the emperor died." He has declared in several journals that he was unable to attend the mikado as he should have done owing to the court etiquette and added that if the emperor had followed his advice and abstained from alcoholic drinks he would still be alive.

Rose Perfume From Paraffin.

However absurd it may seem it is certain that essence of roses may be manufactured from paraffin. The profits offered by this industry are evident at once if one considers that the pure essence of roses is sold at 40 cents a drop for the best. As the essence is fully as popular as it is expensive, the majority of the preparations that are sold in the name of "essence of roses" are nothing but imitations and not always good ones. The latest product was discovered by accident on the congealing of paraffin with liquid air. As the paraffin solidified it was observed that there floated over its surface an unknown liquid containing a new perfume. This perfume when refined was to all intents and purposes "essence of roses." Besides the essence of roses, other perfumes have been obtained by a special process.—Harper's.

Tipping the Hat at Harvard.

Everybody tips his hat at Harvard these days. The custom has been growing gradually for several years, and it is now in full bloom. Every student of the university—and there are over 5,000 of them—tips his hat to President Lowell when he meets him on the street or in the yard, and the chief executive of Harvard returns the silent greeting in like manner. The students universally recognize Dean Le Baron Russell Briggs and Dean Byron S. Hurlbutt and several other widely known members of the Harvard faculty by tipping the hat. Students in the courses at the college are expected to tip their hats to the professors or assistant professors whether they know them personally or not. The line is drawn against the instructors, however.—Boston Post.

Time For a Typhoid Crusade.

More fatal and communicable than the dreaded bubonic plague is typhoid fever. A filth disease, it can be gotten rid of wholly. Yet New York, with its boasted prophylaxis, has more cases today, proportionally to population, than the cities of Europe, pest ridden of old, had a score of years ago. A monograph by Charles F. Bolduan, M. D., of the department of health, shows Berlin with 9.1 deaths per 100,000 in 1890, and Vienna with 9.4, as compared with 11.6 deaths in New York during 1911, the same number in Boston, and 13.7 in Chicago. Berlin and Vienna, during 1911, numbered but 3.6 and 4.1 deaths, respectively, from typhoid.—New York Tribune.

Eiffel Tower Rises and Sinks.

The remarkable discovery has been made that the Eiffel tower sinks over an inch into the ground in certain atmospherical conditions, rising again later to its normal state. It was known that the tower swayed horizontally to the extent of several centimeters, and M. Guillaume of the Academy of Science conceived the idea of stretching a piece of wire from the second story to the ground. Leaving the wire taut, he found that twice after storms it had loosened to the extent of an inch or more. Further investigations have shown that the tower sinks several hours before the approach of stormy weather. In other words, the great structure is an admirable barometer.

Montenegro's Capital.

Cetinje, from whence issued the flat of war, is the smallest capital in Europe, its population numbering only a little over 3,000. It stands on a rather dreary plain, surrounded by mountains and from a distance resembles a straggling French village with its one storied, red tiled houses clustering around half a dozen larger buildings and two church spires. The most imposing buildings in the town are the Austrian and Russian legations, even the palace of King Nicholas being little more than a substantial looking villa. Certainly there is nothing about the town to indicate the warlike spirit which has made its people famous throughout Europe.—Westminster Gazette.

Lifting Pig Iron.

It is quite a common practice to use lifting magnets for handling furnace pig iron. Usually the pigs are stacked horizontally, and not many of them can be lifted at a time, because a relatively small number can be brought into contact with the magnet. Some one has recently hit upon the idea of stacking the pigs vertically, so that the face of the magnet will touch a greater number of pigs. It has been found that by this method the lifting capacity of a magnet which heretofore was able to raise only 1,000 pounds of pig iron was increased to 2,000 pounds.—Chicago Tribune.

STATE HAPPENINGS

Newsfrom Fair Florida Briefly Told

The Kibler brothers of Dunellon are arranging to build a new six story hotel in Lakeland. The contract for the work will be let the first week in January.

—x—

Col. Cromwell Gibbons of Jacksonville, acting as agent for a foreign capitalist, is said to have laid before Governor Gilchrist an offer to buy the remainder of the everglades at $8 an acre.

—x—

The stores of Kathleen, Galloway and Griffin, small towns north of Lakeland were entered and robbed of valuables and the fine driving horse and buggy belonging to C. F. Omohundro of Griffin were also taken. The theft of the horse and buggy was first discovered.

—x—

An order has been issued by the officials of the Florida East Coast railroad that hereafter all kinds of soliciting will be prohibited within the depot grounds. The names of all the hotels will be posted and hereafter each porter will stand under the sign of the house he represents, displaying his card only.—St. Augustine Record.

—x—

The Woman's Town Improvement association in St. Petersburg has asked for permission to erect a clubhouse in Lake park. The idea is to erect a building to cost $6,000 for the exclusive use of the association. The council is said to be in favor of granting the lease as required.

—x—

It is stated that at a recent meeting of the Florida Yacht club and Florida Country club in Jacksonville, action was taken barring from these club houses the dancing of the turkey trot, bunny hug and all other dances which have been so widely discussed, and barred from so many clubhouses throughout the country. The dancing of these various steps has caused considerable and severe criticism.

Announcement has been made of the appointment of Dr. W. M. Bevis of Lakeland, as assistant superintendent of public instruction of Florida, the appointment being made by W. N. Sheats, superintendent-elect. Dr. Bevis will take the office filled for so many years by Miss Clem Hampton, who, after the inauguration of Professor Sheats, will be no longer connected with the state superintendent's office.

The Cocoanut Grove Citrus Growers' association has shipped 40 cars of fruit this season, practically all grapefruit. Most of the fruit has been sold f. o. b. and the past two weeks has brought good prices, as the quality is excellent, smooth skinned and well colored. The association is hauling fruit with a motor truck 24 feet long and weighing 4,200 pounds. It is owned and operated by F. Alton Gibbs, who claims that he can load a car of fruit from a grove four miles away in a little over three hours. Florida growers are beginning to realize the worth of motor trucks in handling fruit and say it is much cheaper than mules and wagons or other means of transportation.

Two Points of View.

On one occasion, at a party given by Sir John Millais, Lady Halle rose to play the violin, when to her intense amusement she heard Landseer exclaim: "Good gracious! A woman playing the fiddle!" On the other hand, an old-fashioned nobleman, when he saw a gentleman sit down to the piano, contemptuously remarked: "I wonder if the creature can sew!"

HUMOROUS QUIPS

A Wasted Smile.

She looked at me and sweetly smiled.
No fairer face I'd ever seen,
As winsome as a little child,
I'll bet she wasn't past eighteen.
Her hair was golden as the sun,
Her eyes were orbs of wondrous blue.
She looked at me and smiled as one
That I might well have spoken to.

She sat alone, and so did I,
This damsel with the form divine.
Her lips were red as cherry pie,
But only once her eyes met mine.
Oh, there was glory in her face!
Her cheeks were pink as any rose.
Her every move was one of grace,
And Grecian was, I think, her nose.

I do not know the maiden's name
Nor where she got upon the car.
To tell the truth is now my aim,
I give the facts just as they are.
I only know she smiled at me
And that she smiled at me in vain.
I'm married, and, though fair was she,
I never looked her way again.

Couldn't Multiply.

Little Willie's father found his youthful son holding up one of his rabbits by the ears and saying, "How much is 7 times 7, now?"

"Tuh," the father heard him say; "I knew you couldn't! Here's another one. Six times 6 is how much?"

"Why, Willie, what in the world are you doing with your rabbit?"

Willie threw down the rabbit in disgust. "I knew our teacher was lying to us," was all he said.

"Why, how?" asked his father.

"Why, she told us this morning that rabbits were the greatest multipliers in the world."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Better Left Unsaid.

Here is a case of misplaced generosity. The guilty party meant well, but her manner of showing it wasn't what you might call tactful. It was at a bridge party. Ice cream and wafers were served.

Her Own Idea.

Two little girls became involved in a quarrel the other day which culminated in physical violence. One of the mothers took her little daughter to task very severely. Wishing to emphasize the enormity of her offense, the mother said, "It's the devil who tells you to do such naughty things."

The little girl replied between sobs, "He may have told me to pull her hair, but I thought of kicking her shins all by myself."—McCall's Magazine.

His Present.

Henry VIII, the King With Six Wives

HENRY VIII.

This is the story of a king who, for 19 years of his reign was one of the best and greatest monarchs in all history; and who, during his last 20 years was a monster. He was Henry VIII. of England. Henry's father had educated him for the priesthood, when his elder brother, Arthur, died; thus making Henry heir to the English throne. Arthur had been married to Catherine of Aragon, who brought him a dowry of 200,000 crowns. Sooner than to return this large dowry, the miserly old king married Catherine to Henry. She was some years older than her boy husband and a totally unfit wife for such a youth.

In 1509 Henry VIII. became king. He was eighteen years old and the most popular man in his kingdom. Handsome, athletic, jolly, clever, he was the exact opposite of his miser father. England was weak from long civil wars and bad rule. She had sunk almost to the level of a third rate power.

Henry quickly changed all this. With splendid statesmanship he steadily lifted his country to a foremost rank among Europe's nations. He won victories against French and Scottish foes. Education and commerce throve. The land waxed rich and happy. For writing a church book Henry received from the pope the title of "Defender of the Faith." A prosperous, contented nation, daily increasing in greatness, was ruled by a wise, just and beloved king.

So much for the first 19 years. Then came the change—a change that turned a hero king into a blackguard. A change no historian has been able to explain. It was caused in the first place by a woman.

Henry's wife, Catherine of Aragon, was growing old. He was still in his prime. She was homely, severe, solemn—his opposite in all things. They had had two sons, who had died in earliest infancy. Their only living child was a sickly daughter (who later became Queen Mary). Henry, up to this time, had treated his elderly wife kindly enough. There was no stain on his private life. His morals were unusually good, his career free from scandal. But, after nearly a score of years on the throne, he suddenly fell in love with Anne Boleyn, one of Catherine's ladies-in-waiting. Anne was beautiful, weak, vicious; she was decidedly attractive in spite of the fact that she had two thumbs on each hand.

Henry wished to marry her. He declared that his early marriage to his brother's widow was illegal, and sought to have it annulled.

The pope refused to sanction so wicked a plan. Henry, thereupon, broke away from allegiance to the Catholic church. He [illegible] the pope and declared himself the head of all religious [illegible] in England. Then he proceeded to modify his country's religion and to behead all who would not conform to his new way of thinking. He also plundered England's peaceful monasteries. Catholics who remained loyal to their church and to the pope were slain without mercy or justice. Protestants who objected to Henry's regulations were also put to death. Any man who crossed the monarch's wishes or ideas was executed. Whole families were killed for no better reason than that they obeyed their own consciences rather than the unjust orders of a tyrant. By Catholics and Protestants alike Henry grew to be loathed. His early popularity was drowned in oceans of innocent blood, shed at his cruel orders. Where once he had governed by love he now ruled by inspiring death fears. Some writers say that no less than 72,000 persons were executed during the last 20 years of Henry's reign. This is, perhaps, an exaggeration. But the victims could be numbered by thousands. The once genial, gracious sovereign had become a monster.

Anne Boleyn profited little by her marriage with Henry. Not long after the birth of her daughter (afterward Queen Elizabeth), she was suspected of unfaithfulness and was beheaded by Henry's orders. Next day he married Anne's lady-in-waiting, Jane Seymour. Jane died soon after the birth of her son, Edward. Henry then married Anne of Cleves, a Flemish princess, whom he had never seen. At first sight he fell into a rage, voiced her for a hideous "Flanders mare," and divorced her. Soon afterward he married Catherine Howard. Doubting her loyalty to him, he had her put to death and married his sixth wife, Catherine Parr.

How much oftener he might have gone to the altar, had he lived long enough, cannot be guessed. Ill-health had already begun to disfigure his handsome face, cripple his body and make life an agony for him. On January 28, 1547, he died, in his fifty-sixth year, unmourned, hated; his very memory a thing of horror.

STATE HAPPENINGS

News from Fair Florida Briefly Told

The Kibler brothers of Dunellon are arranging to build a new six story hotel in Lakeland. The contract for the work will be let the first week in January.

—x—

Col. Cromwell Gibbons of Jacksonville, acting as agent for a foreign capitalist, is said to have laid before Governor Gilchrist an offer to buy the remainder of the everg ades at $8 an acre.

—x—

The stores of Kathleen, Galloway and Griffin, small towns north of Lake land were entered and robbed of valuables and the fine driving horse and buggy belonging to C. F. Omohundro of Griffin were also taken. The theft of the horse and buggy was first discovered.

—x—

An order has been issued by the officials of the Florida East Coast railroad that hereafter all kinds of soliciting will be prohibited within the depot grounds. The names of all the hotels will be posted and hereafter each porter will stand under the sign of the house he represents, displaying his card only.—St. Augustine Record.

—x—

The Woman's Town Improvement association in St. Petersburg has asked for permission to erect a clubhouse in Lake park. The idea is to erect a building to cost $6,000 for the exclusive use of the association. The council is said to be in favor of granting the lease as required.

—x—

It is stated that at a recent meeting of the Florida Yacht club and Florida Country club in Jacksonville, action was taken barring from these club houses the dancing of the turkey trot, bunny hug and all other dances which have been so widely discussed, and barred from so many clubhouses throughout the country. The dancing of these various steps has caused considerable and severe criticism.

The Cocoanut Grove Citrus Growers' association has shipped 40 cars of fruit this season, practically all grapefruit. Most of the fruit has been sold f. o. b. and the past two weeks has brought good prices, as the quality is excellent, smooth skinned and well colored. The association is loading fruit with a motor truck 24 feet long and weighing 4,700 pounds. It is owned and operated by F. Alton Gibbs, who claims that he can load a car of fruit from a grove four miles away in a little over three hours. Florida growers are beginning to realize the worth of motor trucks in handling fruit and say it is much cheaper than mules and wagons or other means of transportation.

Two Points of View.

On one occasion, at a party given by Sir John Millais, Lady Halle rose to play the violin, when to her intense amusement she heard Landseer exclaim: "Good gracious! A woman playing the fiddle!" On the other hand, an old-fashioned nobleman, when he saw a gentleman sit down to the piano, contemptuously remarked: "I wonder if the creature can sew!"

HUMOROUS QUIPS

A Wasted Smile.

She looked at me and sweetly smiled.
No fairer face I'd ever seen,
As winsome as a little child.
I'll bet she wasn't past eighteen.
Her hair was golden as the sun.
Her eyes were orbs of wondrous blue.
She looked at me and smiled as one
That I might well have spoken to.

She sat alone, and so did I,
This damsel with the form divine.
Her lips were red as cherry pie,
But only once her eyes met mine.
Oh, there was glory in her face!
Her cheeks were pink as any rose.
Her every move was one of grace,
And Grecian was, I think, her nose.

I do not know the maiden's name
Nor where she got upon the car.
To tell the truth is now my aim.
I give the facts just as they are.
I only know she smiled at me
And that she smiled at me in vain.
I m married, and, though fair was she,
I never looked her way again.

Couldn't Multiply.

Little Willie's father found his youthful son holding up one of his rabbits by the ears and saying, "How much is 7 times 7, now?"

"Pah," the father heard him say: "I knew you couldn't! Here's another one. Six times 6 is how much?"

"Why, Willie, what in the world are you doing with your rabbit?"

Willie threw down the rabbit in disgust. "I knew our teacher was lying to us," was all he said.

"Why, how?" asked his father.

"Why, she told us this morning that rabbits were the greatest multipliers in the world."—Ladies' Home Journal

Better Left Unsaid.

Here is a case of misplaced generosity. The guilty party meant well, but her manner of showing it wasn't what you might call tactful. It was at a bridge party. Ice cream and wafers were served.

"Miss Ghyoans," urged the hostess "do have some more ice cream."

"No, really, I"—

"Oh, don't be so dainty or I'll think you don't like it."

"Well, just a mouthful."

"Ah, that's right, Jane, fill Miss Ghyoan's plate for her!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Her Own Idea.

Two little girls became involved in a quarrel the other day which culminated in physical violence. One of the mothers took her little daughter to task very severely. Wishing to emphasize the enormity of her offense, the mother said, "It's the devil who tells you to do such naughty things."

The little girl replied between sobs. "He may have told me to pull her hair, but I thought of kicking her shins all by myself."—McCall's Magazine.

His Present.

"I don't know what to buy for my husband's birthday. He has stacks of neckties."

Historic Blackguards

Henry VIII, the King With Six Wives

THIS is the story of a king who, for 18 years of his reign was one of the best and greatest monarchs in all history; and who, during his last 20 years was a monster. He was Henry VIII. of England. Henry's father had educated him for the priesthood, when his elder brother, Arthur, died; thus making Henry heir to the English throne. Arthur had been married to Catherine of Aragon, who brought him a dowry of 200,000 crowns. Sooner than to return this large dowry, the miserly old king married Catherine to Henry. NOTED HOTEL MAN HERE FOR VISIT WITH POTTER

FRANK MILLER, PROPRIETOR OF THE FAMOUS MISSION INN AT RIVERSIDE, CAL., SPENDS DAY HERE.

Daytona was visited yesterday by one of the most noted hotel men in the country, Frank Miller, proprietor of the famous Mission Inn at Riverside, California. Mr. Miller was accompanied by his wife, came here from Jacksonville for a visit with E. L. Potter, president of the Clarendon Hotel company.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller have been in Washington for some time and while at the capital Mr. Miller secured the exclusive franchise to operate hotels in the Yosemite valley in California. This concession is granted by the United States government. On their way back to California Mr. and Mrs. Miller came by way of Jacksonville and came down to Daytona to investigate the claim that Daytona is the prettiest winter resort in the world.

HUNTING PARTY HAD MORE FUN THAN GAME

Messrs. J. H. Donnelly, J. L. Maley, T. O. Melton and Tom Dixon formed a hunting party Tuesday to try out a couple of new hounds which Mr. Donnelly had brought south for Mr. Melton. They drove out on the DeLand road in Mr. Dixon's car and hunted in the vicinity of Indian lake.

The dogs behaved well and soon jumped a couple of deer which the drivers to Mr. Dixon's stand. It is reported that Mr. Dixon fired four shots at the deer without turning a hair on either of them and was so excited that he caught one leg of his overalls on a snag and tore it completely off and had to appear thereafter with this portion of his anatomy clothed only in his under garments which fortunately stood the strain. His appearance kept his companions in a chronic state of laughter.

On the way in Mr. Dixon furnished still more mirth by diving for some coots shot on a pond along the road side by the other members of the party. Mr. Dixon volunteered to wade in for them, as the pond was only a couple of feet in depth. His first step, however, plunged him up to his neck in a hole, from which he emerged dripping and blowing. At the two-foot level of the pond. Undiscouraged by this mishap, and the chaffing of his comrades, he finally secured the coots which were the sole results of the day's sport.
